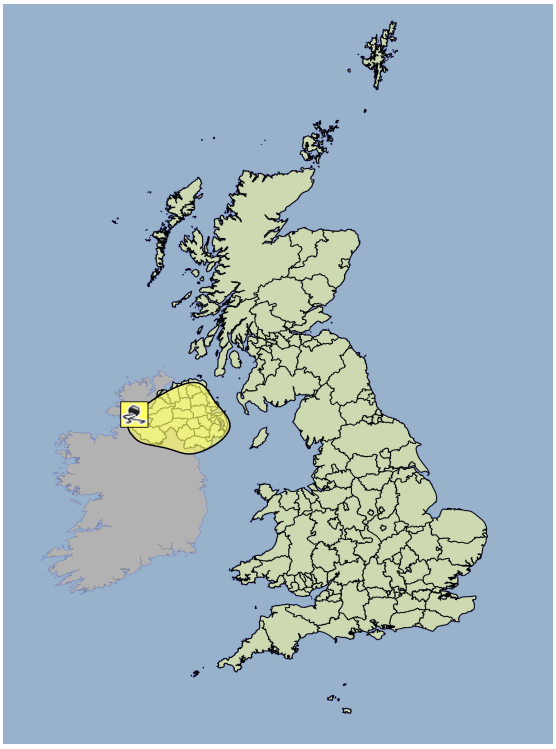
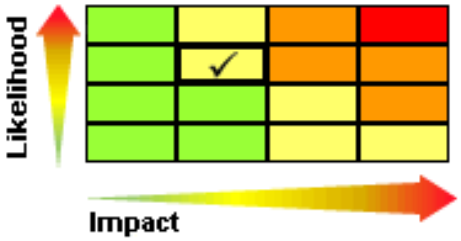
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
As Wednesday's vigorous depression moves away northeastwards across Scotland an increasingly cold and unstable westerly flow will cover Northern Ireland. This will bring wintry showers leading to icy stretches on any untreated surfaces or where earlier treatment has been washed off. Further showers of a wintry mix are likely on Thursday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 23:00 on Wed, 12th Feb 2014 until 10:00 on Thu, 13th Feb 2014

Showers will turn increasingly wintry later on Wednesday evening, overnight and into Thursday morning. As the winds decrease, clear spells between the showers will allow road temperatures to fall below freezing leading to some icy stretches. In addition, local snow accumulations of 3-6 cm are likely on ground above 200 m and perhaps up to 10 cm on the highest routes above 300 m in the west. On low ground 1-3 cm may accumulate in places. Drivers are advised to take extra care on the roads and be aware of the risk of some minor travel disruption.
